

Kaibosh

I would like to enter the Kaibosh Kāpiti-Horowhenua Volunteers for their hard and happy work. During Level 2 a small team of our wonderful Volunteers and the Ops Manager Ben Wakefield continued to sort out quality food to reach those in need, with smiles on their faces (under the masks of course). Kaibosh is the link between the food industry and support charities and community services, by freeing up more of their time to focus on their clients and not worry about the food side of things. Thank you!

Food rescue is good for our community and environment in many ways:

- Charities and community groups receive a wide range of healthy, nutritious food.
- This food is provided free of charge, allowing community groups to focus their limited resources on providing valuable services.
- Stopping quality food from being thrown out significantly cuts down the amount of carbon emissions entering the atmosphere.
- Food donors make a valuable contribution by providing food to those in their community who need it most.
- Volunteers have a direct and positive impact on their community and environment.

Te Wiki Tūao ā-Motu
national volunteer week
21–27 JUNE 2020

Te Hua o te
Mahi Tahī
The benefit of working together